Ways to Show How HR Impacts and Adds Value to the Bottom Line

Dave Ulrich, a renowned HR scholar and author of seminal works like "The Why of Work, The Leadership Code" and "The HR Value Proposition", firmly believes that HR must adopt an outside-in orientation: that instead of a singular focus on employees, HR needs to be focused on delivering value to stakeholders outside the firm.

Dave Ulrich on the outside-in view of HR - Roland Berger

The human resources department can actually be an incredibly valuable strategic partner to management at any organization. Here are two areas in which HR helps contribute to the bottom line. If your HR group lacks either time or skills to work in these areas, you may want to consider outsourcing HR projects or management to complement your existing staff.

How is HR adding value to your organization?

Thus for performance management to add value it needs to be an integral part of the working day rather than something that happens once a year (or at more frequent preset intervals) in line with agreed HR or company policy. Therefore it should form part of every conversation between team members as well as managers and subordinates.
